CHAPTER xxxviii

An Act to redefine and extend the objects of the Shakespeare Birthplace Trust; to vary the constitution of the trustees of the said trust and to extend the powers of the trustees; to repeal the provisions of the Shakespeare Birthplace, &c., Trust Act, 1891, and the Shakespeare Birthplace, &c., Trust (Amendment) Act, 1930, and to re-enact subject to variations certain of the provisions of those Acts; and for other purposes.

[27th July, 1961.]

WHEREAS by the Shakespeare Birthplace, &c., Trust Act, 1891 (hereinafter in this Act referred to as "the Act of 1891"), the Trustees and Guardians of Shakespeare's Birthplace (hereinafter in this Act referred to as "the trustees") were incorporated and certain lands and other property including the house generally known and reputed to be the house in which William Shakespeare was born were transferred to the trustees:

And whereas provision was made by the Act of 1891 for the appointment of ex-officio trustees and life trustees and powers were conferred on the trustees for the management of the trust property:

And whereas by the Shakespeare Birthplace, &c., Trust (Amendment) Act, 1930 (hereinafter in this Act referred to as "the Act of 1930"), the constitution of the trustees was varied by limiting the number of certain of the ex-officio trustees and by establishing a new class of trustee called representative trustees to be appointed by the governing bodies of the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, London and Birmingham:

And whereas by the Act of 1930 the purchase of certain properties by the trustees was confirmed and further powers were conferred on the trustees:
And whereas since the passing of the Act of 1930 the interest in and appreciation of the works of William Shakespeare have grown and are continuing to grow not only in Great Britain but in every part of the world:

And whereas since the passing of the Act of 1930 the trustees have acquired further property of Shakespearean interest and have expanded their activities in various directions:

And whereas the objects of the trust and the constitution of the trustees as prescribed by the Act of 1891 and varied by the Act of 1930 and the powers conferred on the trustees by those Acts are insufficient to permit the full development of the purposes for which the trust was originally formed and with a view to providing for the nation a perpetual memorial to William Shakespeare it is expedient to redefine and extend the objects of the trust as in this Act provided, to vary the constitution of the trustees and to extend their powers as in this Act also provided:

And whereas it is expedient that such other provisions should be made as are in this Act contained and that the Acts of 1891 and 1930 should be repealed:

And whereas the objects of this Act cannot be attained without the authority of Parliament:

May it therefore please Your Majesty that it may be enacted, and be it enacted, by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows (that is to say):—
